ANNUAL AWARD PROCESS

INTRODUCTION

Providing public recognition of exceptional achievement and service within the National Medical Association is an important activity of the Association. Annually the National Medical Association confers four awards to honor luminaries and those medical societies that have demonstrated exemplary leadership. In addition we recognize individuals of national and international stature whose efforts significantly benefit health and medicine.

These awards are:

- The Practitioner of the Year Award
- The Distinguished Service Award
- The Meritorious Achievement Award
- The Local Society of the Year Award

Nominations for each of these awards are accepted from:

- Any individual member
- State or Local Society
- Sections of the Scientific Assembly

SELECTION PROCEDURE

The Past Presidents Council facilitates the selection process and recommends awardees to the Board of Trustees based upon an evaluation of the merits of each nominee as described in the Constitution and By-Laws. Nominations for each of these awards must include a brief narrative description that addresses each criterion required for the specific award.

If there are no nominations that meet the criteria for an award, no award will be made for that year.

TIPS FOR NOMINATORS

Too often in the past, recommendations to the Association have not addressed the criteria required for the submission of the awards, therefore invalidating the submission from consideration. Two examples of the most often errors include:

- Submission is too long
- Submission does not include the narrative to justify the individuals or the societies nominated for those awards by addressing each criterion required for the award.

Submissions should be:

1. Typed, double spaced
